Project Title: Zone 12 Line M (Elmhurst Creek) Channel Enhancements between Baldwin Street and Downstream of UPRR

Project Location - Specific: District's Zone 12 Line M flood control channel (Elmhurst Creek) between Baldwin Street and downstream of Union Pacific Railroad

Project Location - City: Oakland Project Location - County: Alameda

Description of, Nature, and Purpose of Project: The Alameda County Flood Control and Water Conservation District (District) proposed project will improve Elmhurst Creek (District's Zone 12 Line M) between Baldwin Street to downstream of the Union Pacific Railroad (UPRR) in Oakland. The existing trapezoidal earthen channel is 28 to 38 feet wide with an approximately 15-foot wide bottom. The channel bottom will be restored to the approximate original design condition. The south bank of the existing channel will not be regraded to protect existing seasonal wetlands. The north bank of the channel will be rebuilt with earthen materials and erosion control treatment. Channel slopes on both banks will be enhanced by planting native tidal and transition vegetation. Downstream of the UPRR bridge and existing box culvert, an approximately 54-foot long concrete and vegetated rock transition will be installed. Two existing stormwater pipes along the north bank will be extended to finished grade and terminate at rock outfalls. A steel sheet pile wall with concrete cap will be installed near the north property line, and a reinforced concrete wall will be installed near the south property line, approximately two feet above existing grade. Both walls will be installed above and beyond the existing top-of-bank. The purpose of the project is to improve flood conveyance and enhance habitat.
